

I have become aware that the FCC is considering overturning the NJ Do Not Call law. I sincerely hope that this will not be done. For the first time in years we have quiet, uninterrupted dinner hours. I do not race through the house to answer the phone only to hear someone mispronounce my name and try to sell me something I do not need or want. Just because I may have had a business dealing with a company 1.5 years ago (and exactly what can be construed as a "business dealing?"), that does not mean that I wish to be contacted now. NJ passed a law that filled the needs of its citizens; the FCC should not change that law to cater to the wants of telemarketers.
